

Jūyō-tōken at the 48th jūyō shinsa held on October 11, 2002

tantō, mei: Masashige (正重) (Sengo, 千子)

Measurements

nagasa 27.7 cm, sori 0.3 cm, motohaba 2.65 cm, nakago-nagasa 0.3 cm, no nakago-sori

Description

Keijō: hira-zukuri, mitsu-mune, wide mihaba, sunnobi, some sori which appears as sakizori, scarce fukura

Kitae: itame that is mixed with mokume and nagare and that features chikei plenty of ji-nie

Hamon: nie-laden ko-notare with a wide nioiguchi that is mixed with gunome, angular elements, chōji, ashi, yō, some nie-kuzure, plenty of sunagashi, kinsuji, yubashiri, and muneyaki, the ha is identical on both sides

Bōshi: widely hardened midare-komi with a rather late starting and pointed kaeri that runs back in a long fashion and connects with the muneyaki

Nakago: ubu, tapers to an iriyamagata-jiri, kiri-yasurime, two mekugi-ana (one plugged), the sashi-omote side bears in the upper half and above of the first, the ubu mekugi-ana, a thickly chiseled niji-me

Explanation

Masashige (正重) was with Masazane (正真) one of the outstanding students of the first generation Muramasa (村正). Masashige's workmanship is very close to that of the master but his jiba is somewhat more nie-laden and the hada stands more out than that of Muramasa, giving his blades usually a more rustic character.

This tantō shows a kitae in itame that is mixed with mokume and nagare and that features chikei and plenty of ji-nie. The hamon is a nie-laden ko-notare that is mixed with gunome, angular elements, chōji, ashi, yō, plenty of sunagashi, kinsuji, yubashiri, and muneyaki. The ha is rich in variety and identical on both sides and so we clearly recognize the characteristic features of the Sengo School. Also very typical is the tanagobara-shaped tang. The ha is noticeably nie-laden and with its tendency towards nie-kuzure, its plenty of sunagashi, and the bōshi with its widely hardened, late starting and pointed kaeri, we have here quite a bold interpretation that displays the individual workmanship of Masashige. A masterwork that truly reflects the style of this smith.